

Located in Saint-Cyr, on the lowlands by the Mediterranean between Toulon and Marseille, we find the 26 Ha property of Château Pradeaux. Owned by the Portalis family since 1752, the domaine Château Pradeaux was inherited by Jean-Marie-Etienne Portalis, minister under Napoleon I. Later, in 1940, the Countess of Portalis, fleeing from the German invasion of Paris, began planting Mourvedre. This variety succeeded in putting Bandol on the map and today accounts for 80% of vineyards in Pradeaux, the rest being Grenache & Cinsault.. Having ensured the AOC for the Bandol region in conjunction with M.Peyraud (domaine Tempier), Countess Portalis passed on the reins to her nephew Cyrille in 1983. After completing his studies in Beaune and following in his aunt's footsteps, he has become the champion...
