

Pascal took over the family business in 1985. Nicolas joined him in 1993. The two brothers replanted some vineyard plots, restored the old farm buildings, transforming them into cellars and pantries, and developed a direct sales network for all their wines.

In 2019, Pascal's eldest son Victorien, a new generation winemaker, arrived to complete the team. His brother Benjamin is also regularly involved in the work of the family estate.

Situated on the steep slopes of the village of Maimbray, most of the plots are located on calcareous clay soil dating back to the Kimmeridgian period, also known locally as 'terre blanche', meaning 'white earth'. which means 'white earth'.
