

One of Austria's best wine producing regions, the stunningly beautiful Wachau district specializes in wines made from the varieties Grüner Veltliner & Riesling. And no account of the Austrian wine industry would be complete without mention of Josef Jamek and his pivotal role in its development. In the 1950's Jamek led the production of a new style of wine.... totally dry, non-chaptalised and with lower alcohol than what was then typical. This became the new standard for the Wachau, which today still employs its own quality control system based on ripeness of the grapes and alcohol content for its dry, white wines. Josef's legacy continues today through his youngest daughter Jutta and her husband Hans Altmann, who together with the help of their son Herwig run the Jamek operations in...
